What is Fair Trade?

World trade increasingly benefits rich countries at the expense of the poor; the drive for low prices and high profits often results in low wages, poor working conditions and lack of job security.

Fair Trade is about better prices, decent working conditions, local sustainability, and fair terms of trade for farmers and other producers in the developing world.

Farmers and producers in over 60 countries benefit from the Fair Trade movement.

Fair Trade in the UK

The UK has been at the cutting-edge of developing new and fairer ways of trading with our partners in developing countries.

Over 3000 products in the UK now carry the Fairtrade Mark and the UK market is worth over £1.3 billion.

More than 75% of the population of the UK recognise the Fairtrade Mark.

Many leading supermarkets and an increasing number of catering outlets stock Fairtrade products.
